Nick Elliott is a six-foot-nine-inch, Electronic Dance Music DJ, producer, and songwriter. Although born in St. Louis, Missouri, a four-year-old Elliott moved to Virginia, where he developed his deep love of music. Already a percussionist, Elliott furthered his interest and involvement in musical performance through brass instruments. In 2011, Elliott discovered “First of the Year (Equinox)” by Skrillex and was instantly hooked. It was at this moment that he realized how strong his passion is for EDM production. While continuing to remix and perform locally, he qualified for a position on the number one (at the time) elite junior triathlon team in the United States. Putting in 30 plus hours of weekly training, Elliott traveled the nation and, later, the world representing his country on Team USA in endurance sports championships. Focusing his production skills on EDM with some pop and hip hop crossover, Elliott’s greatest influences in the music industry are Skrillex, Afrojack, Calvin Harris, David Guetta, and Avicii. The young DJ seeks to inspire others as well. “Producing electronic dance music, playing festivals and clubs, and connecting with music fans are things I’ve always wanted to do,” explains Nick. Nick’s first song to hit over 1 million streams on Spotify was “Through This Night,” which happened in summer of 2021. Now that some of the Covid restrictions have lifted, Elliott has made his Vegas debut at XS Night Swim and will open for Lost Kings in D.C. at Echostage this September.
