Nick Elliott is an accomplished Electronic Dance Music DJ, producer, and songwriter now based in Austin, Texas. Nick loves to perform and brings his high energy to guide music lovers on a journey through diverse sets. Having played percussion instruments at an early age, Elliott began producing dance tracks at 12 after he heard “First of the Year (Equinox)” by Skrillex. Among Nick’s other early influences are Afrojack, Calvin Harris, David Guetta, and Avicii.

While continuing to produce, remix, and perform locally, he qualified for a position on the number one elite junior triathlon team in the United States. Elliott traveled the nation and, later, the world representing his country on Team USA in endurance sports championships. Shifting his focus to a professional career in EDM, Nick has translated that energy into his music and performances. His recent collabs, headlining performances, and event support for some of the biggest EDM DJ producers continues to provide him with amazing forums in which to interact with a diverse cross-section of the global dance music movement. Elliott has headlined some of the top clubs across the country as well as provided event support for some of the biggest EDM DJ producers.

When asked about his favorite things about EDM, Elliot is always quick to say he loves the fans and any opportunities he has to connect with them over the common bond of music. Performances are where he thrives. Nick is looking forward to his return to Vegas and DC – including his upcoming set at Moonrise Festival and Labor Day performances in Las Vegas.
